

International Workshop

“The role of micro-credentials in a European joint learning landscape”

Location: University of Bucharest (90 Panduri St., 050663 Bucharest, Romania)
“I. Mihăilescu” Amphitheatre (1st floor)

Date & Time: 30 March 2023 (10:00-17:00 EEST)

The European higher education landscape is facing significant changes in how universities and other higher education providers respond to the everchanging personal, professional, and societal needs of current and future learners, in matters of content, quality approaches, formats, offers, and certification. In such a changing context, the nature and relevance of traditional degrees and programmes has always been discussed, while the raise of joint approaches to delivering educational offer is more and more present in the vision for a future Europe. As European Alliances and other key actors across Europe start testing the new European Degree label work towards a common approach in designing and delivering micro-credentials in higher education and lifelong learning settings, the connection between micro-credentials and joint degrees and programmes becomes more and more relevant.

How can micro-credentials contribute to joint learning offers across Europe and what is the connection between these components? Can joint programmes be designed and delivered based on a ‘micro-credentials philosophy’, as flexible offers for traditional and non-traditional students? Are joint European Degrees the tool for assuring a solid presence of European higher education in global educational markets? The discussions and debates proposed for this mutual learning workshop aims to investigate these and many other issues connected with designing European joint learning and the connection with micro-credentials, modularisation, flexible learning, and digital credentials, starting from the Commission’s strategical approaches, to pilot developments at grassroot level.
